CENSUS OF NEW ZEALAND,

20th April, 1926.

HOUSEHOLDER'S FAMILY SCHEDULE.

NOTE.—The Householder is responsible for the enumeration of all persons passing the Census in his house. To do this he is required to—

- (a.) Complete the Householder's Dwelling Schedule, giving particulars as to the dwelling, and of any poultry kept, together with a list of persons, not members of the Householder's family, who are enumerated with the household.
- (b.) Complete Family Schedule, giving particulars of members of his own family passing the Census night in his dwelling.
- (c.) See that a Personal Schedule is attached to the Dwelling and Family Schedules for each person, not a member of his own family usually resident in the household, who passed Census night in his dwelling. In the case of Personal Schedules furnished under sealed cover, the householder is responsible for seeing that the particulars required are given on the outside of the envelope correctly.

- (d.) Should a visitor, or any person other than a member of the householder's family usually resident in the household, unexpectedly pass the Census night in the dwelling and there is no Personal Schedule available or procurable in time, such person or persons should be enumerated on the Family Schedule, leaving one or two blank lines separating the entries for the householder's family from those for such person or persons.

DECLARATION.

I DECLARE that this Householder's Family Schedule (Census—7) is completely and correctly filled up to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Signature of householder or person in charge.

EXPLANATORY NOTE.

The New Zealand Government is investigating the practicability of providing assistance for householders with families. Statistics of the social conditions as they exist throughout the country are required to enable the problem to be properly studied and estimates made of the cost, &c. Questions have accordingly been included in this Census Schedule, not only as to the number of dependent children under 16, but also as to the income category of all persons over 16.

The actual income is not asked, but each person is required to indicate into which category he or she falls. In determining this classification each person should count all income being received in his or her own right—i.e., earnings for services rendered, plus any income to which entitled from other sources. Allowances received by wives from husbands should not be counted; nor should allowances from parents, or other relatives, unless for services assisting, be included.

Wives, daughters, or other dependants with no separate income of their own should classify themselves in the category "No Income." Persons in constant or regular employment should classify themselves according to the rate of remuneration being received at date of Census, plus any other income received during the previous twelve months. Those in irregular or casual employment, or in business, should determine their classification by the amount of their income for the twelve months preceding Census date. The income to be determined is the income without deduction for any household or domestic expenditure.

The problem involves not only the consideration of the incomes of the families themselves, but also their relative positions to other members of the community, and the circumstances of the unmarried also; hence the question as to incomes applies to all persons over 16.

Owing to the very high standard of general intelligence of the New Zealand people, information has hitherto been obtained throwing light on several aspects of social problems not readily obtainable in many countries, and the Government on this occasion confidently appeals to the people to supply accurately the information required as to incomes. The Government gives an unqualified assurance that the information so obtained will be used only for statistical purposes. As on previous occasions, when the information from the Census schedules is transferred to the punched machine cards, where the identity of the individual is quite lost, the schedules themselves will be destroyed by fire under supervision.

To give added security and confidence on this occasion, the privilege of supplying personal schedules under sealed cover is being allowed.

In the interests of effective check it is desirable that all Personal Schedules should be attached to the Householder's Schedules (Family and Dwelling) open. But in cases where this course is considered objectionable, the person concerned may enclose the schedule (when properly filled up and completed) in a foolscap envelope, providing the following particulars are written on the face of the envelope:—

- (a.) The Schedule number and the numbers of Census district and sub-district should be entered on the top left-hand corner of the envelope—thus—/.../...
- (b.) Answers to question 1 (full name) and question 2 (address on Census night) should be entered in the middle of the envelope.
- (c.) The following declaration should be written (and signed) towards the foot of the envelope:—
"I declare that this envelope contains my Personal Census Schedule completely and correctly filled up to the best of my knowledge and belief."

Signature: .....

The Personal Schedule should now be placed in the envelope, the latter sealed, and handed to the Householder for delivery to the Sub-Enumerator.

CENSUS OF NEW ZEALAND.

This Census is taken under the authority of the Census and Statistics Act, 1910, and regulations. Schedules must be filled in completely and accurately under a penalty of £20. All information will be treated as CONFIDENTIAL, and any person divulging it is liable to a penalty of £20. The Family Schedule is to be filled up by the householder, occupier, or person in charge, who is responsible also for seeing that other occupants not enumerated on the Family Schedule each complete a Personal Schedule. Forms are required by law to be completed, signed, and handed to the Census Sub-enumerator, who will call for them as soon after the 20th April as possible. The Sub-enumerator is authorized to verify facts and make necessary inquiries and corrections.

20th April - 1926.

Where dwellings are occupied by different families or persons (this does not apply to boarders) in separate flats or apartments, each flat or apartment must be treated as a separate dwelling in so far as requiring a separate Dwelling Schedule and Family Schedule, with Personal Schedules, if necessary. Similarly each outstation, &c., on large pastoral establishments requires a separate Dwelling Schedule, &c. In the case of vessels and trains, only Dwelling Schedules and Personal Schedules will be used. ATTACH FAMILY SCHEDULE AND PERSONAL SCHEDULES (IF USED) TO DWELLING SCHEDULE.
