

New Zealand

as a village of 100 people

Our population

4,699,755 is our census usually resident population count in 2018. In our village of 100, each person represents around 47,000 people.

Of the 100 people in our village...

Between 2013 and 2018, our population grew by 10.8%

The median age in our village is 37.4 years

Birthplace

Of the 100 people in our village...

Top 5 overseas birthplaces

For the census usually resident population count

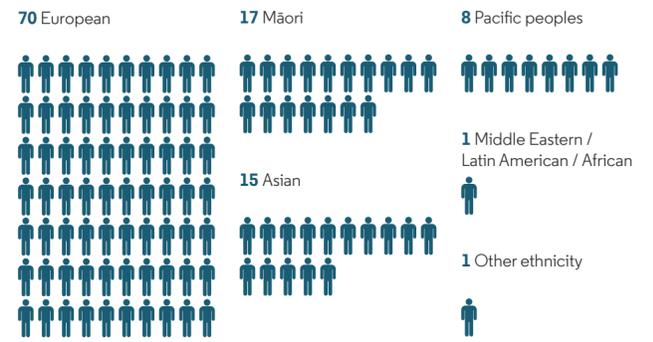

Of the 100 people in our village...

Our ethnic groups*

For the census usually resident population count

Of the 100 people in our village...

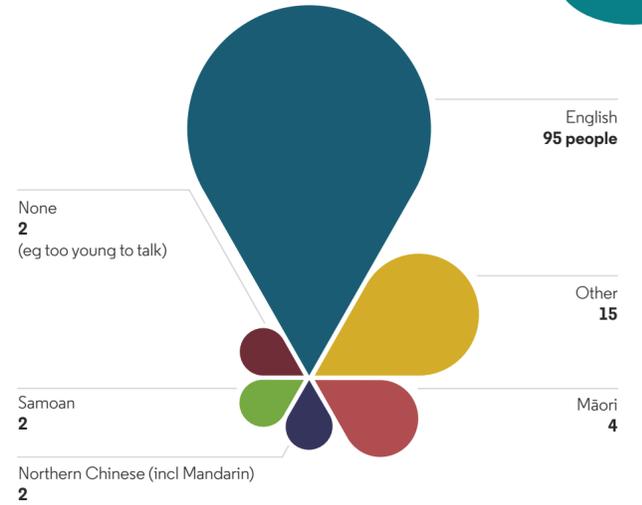

* Multiple answers possible so will total more than 100.

Languages we use*

For the census usually resident population count

Of the 100 people in our village...

* Multiple answers possible so will total more than 100.

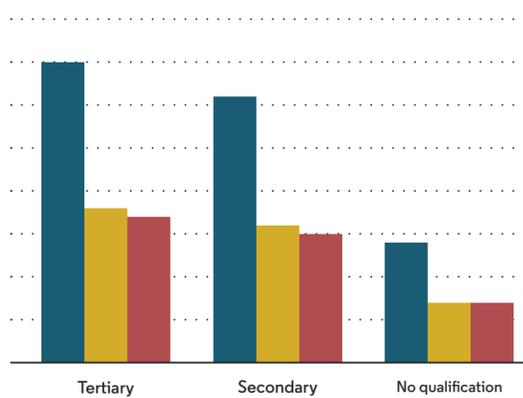

Education and employment

Of the 100 people in our village...

Formal qualifications

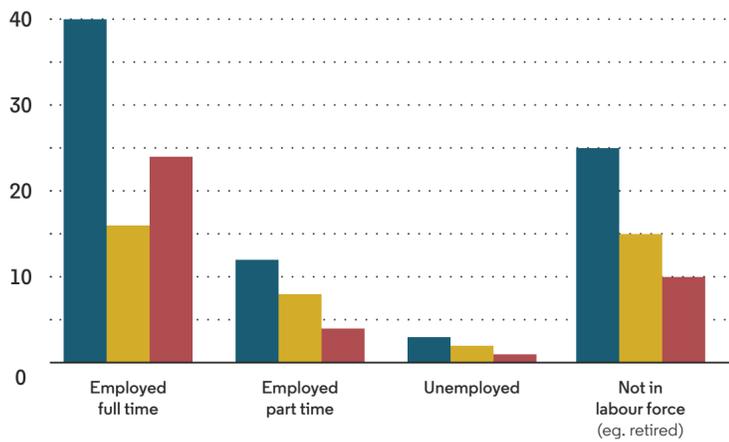

For the census usually resident population count aged 15 years and over

4 out of 5 people aged 15 years and over in our village have a formal qualification

Work status

For the census usually resident population count aged 15 years and over

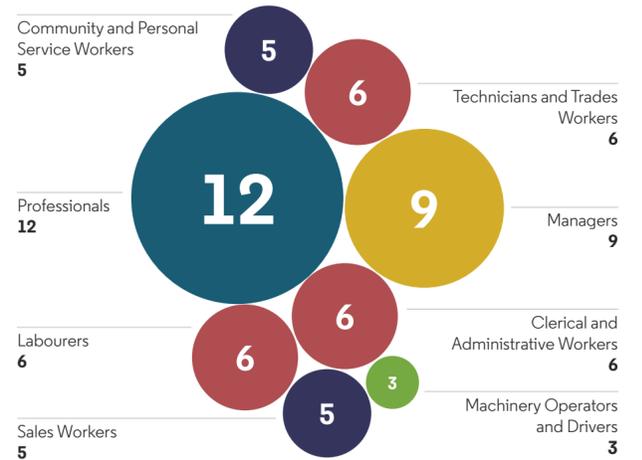

7 out of 10 Māori aged 15 years and over are in the labour force

Labour force: members of the working-age population who, on census day, were classified as 'employed' or 'unemployed'.

Occupation

For the census usually resident population count aged 15 years and over

52 people in our village are employed. The main occupations are...

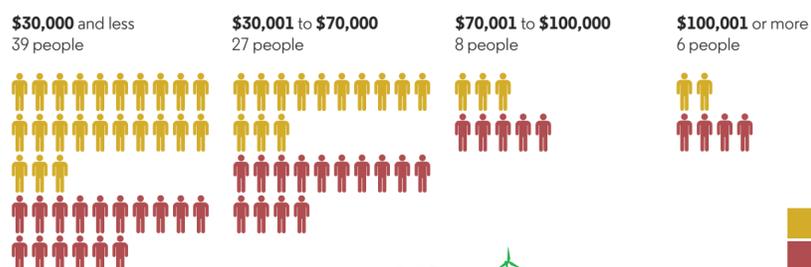

3 out of 10 employed Māori work as either managers or professionals

Personal income

For the census usually resident population count aged 15 years and over

The incomes of people in our village...

Median income

For the census usually resident population count aged 15 years and over

Census information helps to make decisions on which services are needed, such as hospitals, kōhanga reo, schools, roads, public transport, and recreational facilities, and where they should be.

The census is the official count of how many people and dwellings there are in New Zealand. It is used by councils, community groups, iwi, and businesses to plan for the future. Information from the census helps determine how billions of dollars of government funding is spent in the community.